Comment:

I was interested if our local indian tribe will have to follow Cap and Trade rules beginning at first of year. We have a gas station in our area owned by a local Indian tribe. It is named Eagle Feather Trading Post. It s located outside Porterville on HWY 190 in Tulare county. They import their fuel from Nevada. They admit they do not pay any excise or sales tax. They always have some of the cheapest gas in the state. Will they have to start purchasing fuel in the state. Your response will be greatly appreciated

Comment:

I am writing to voice my opposition to the gas tax associated with the cap and trade the will be effective Jan. 1, 2015. This tax will do nothing but drag California back into the recession. You cannot take 2 billion dollars out of the economy and not expect huge economic repercussions. Such as business, closing, layoffs, home foreclosures. This tax will hit every person in the state and especially hurt the working person/family who are just now trying to work their way out of the recession.

This tax will force people to move out of state as they cannot afford to live here or their are no jobs to be had that they can get to support their families.

Their are parts of the state that are still experiencing high unemployment, such as the central valley and this will just knock the legs out from underneath whatever ground the people might have gained back.

The people will pay twice for this tax, first for their own vehicles and then in the form of higher prices for the items they have to have to survive (ie: food)

So please do the people of this state a favor and eliminate this tax as there is absolutely nothing good that come from it in the way of helping the people of Ca. to provide for their families.

Remember every dollar that comes out of the economy in the form of a tax is one less dollar that the people have in their pockets to save, or purchase items to continue to make the economy grow.

So, use common sense and eliminate this tax for the good of every working person and retired person in the state.

Thank you

The Climate Action Reserve respectfully submits the following comments and suggestions regarding the July 2014 proposed updates to the Livestock Project Compliance Offset Protocol and Ozone Depleting Substances Project Compliance Offset Protocol, as well as the proposed quantification methodology changes to the U.S. Forest Compliance Offset Protocol. We appreciate the Air Resources Board's efforts to improve the clarity, usability, and effectiveness of these protocols and we offer the following comments based on our own experience regarding their interpretation and application, including experience with similar protocols administered under the Climate Action Reserve's voluntary offset program.

Subject: green house carbon emissions

Comment:

I hope you find my subject heading a bit humorous because I really don't know what the term means. The fact of the matter of why I am writing you this memo, is that I can't find the real science anywhere, that carbon or carbon dioxide is a pollutant. I feel this element and that compound have be re-defined as such by environmentalists who are propagating the greatest myth today -- global warming caused by man-made pollutants.

Please show me the science. I'm not convinced that California, or any state of the union for that matter, is under threat of pollution. My memory serves me well enough, that when I was just a youngster, growing up in the San Francisco East Bay Area, I could smell the morning smog emanating from the Martinez refineries and exhaust smog from the cars of that era. There was a real noticable sign of air pollution and that pollution came from obvious sources.

Although my lungs did not suffer by it, the smell was obvious and poor air quality was mildly annoying. That was then in the '70's. Since about mid 1980's and forward, the air has cleaned up significantly to the point I don't smell any car exhaust pollution lingering, and the oil refineries still in operation today are not longer belching out any obnoxiousness (to reinforce my recollection of how it was, I recall the jokes my brothers and I made that while driving up to Lake Tahoe while passing the martinez refineries on the way, we would laugh and joke "look, it's the booger factory!". That was the rotten egg-smell like oder which is an odor no longer present today).

Today, long after the EPA's successful achievement in controlling air pollution from "all angles", cars have cleaner exhaust, refineries have scrubbers, and the air quality is restored. No signs of pollution can be smelled in the air. Ever.

This is simply my own account of how at one time pollution in water and in air was an issue in this country. With the advent of the EPA, created by President Nixon, this agency has performed its function to a sense of completion.

Unfortunately, the EPA is not stopping, but going beyond the call of duty. How will the EPA effect the production of cheap energy...

... I don't know. I think we need to abolish the EPA. They were needed back in the days of Nixon, but now?

Subject: Proposed Updates to Compliance Offset Protocols

Comment:

The Compliance Offset Developers Association (CODA) appreciates the opportunity to comment on the proposed updates to the Compliance Offset Protocols - specifically for Livestock Projects - as incorporated by reference in the proposed amendments to the California Cap-and-Trade Regulation as described in the draft dated July 29, 2014.

CODA is an association comprised of six of the leading developers of emission reduction projects designed for compliance in the California Cap-and-Trade program. CODA's membership has substantial experience in the implementation of projects designed to result in emission reduction offsets, and represents a majority of the projects listed as ARB-Early Action projects or ARB Compliance Projects.

Our comments are based on practical experience over the last five years in working to generate and qualify offsets from the project types included in ARBs program. Incorporating them would provide OPOs/APDs with greater clarity on how they should monitor and operate projects and remove unnecessary cost and complexity without compromising environmental integrity.

Please see the attached file for CODA's comments on the proposed updates to the protocol for Livestock Projects.

Subject: Corporate Associations Clarification

Comment:

Tesoro appreciates the progress CARB has made addressing industry's concerns regarding corporate association reporting. We seek two additional clarifications based on the language in the 15-day package.

Tesoro understands that 95830 (c)(1)(H)(1) is created to allow registered entity to use an alternate reporting method for direct corporate association not registered in Cap-and-Trade and linked ETS programs. Alternative documents include SEC Form 10-K, FERC application, NFA application, Form 40 or 40S filed with CFTC, Part1A of Form ADV filed with SEC. Other than this alternative all information specified in 96833 (d)(1)-(2) must be reported. Tesoro understands the need to provide the information in 96833 (d)(1)-(2) for all direct and indirect corporate association. However, prior CARB guidance indicated that such information was not necessary for indirect corporate associations not registered in Cap and Trade or linked jurisdiction. This exception is not clear in the revised language. Tesoro proposes not to delete the "an unregistered entity" qualifier for indirect corporate associations in 95833 (d).

Secondly, please clarify which entities are referenced in the language below (see question in parenthesis):

Last sentence of 95830 (f) - If changes in information submitted pursuant to section 95830(c)(1)(H) are related to entities (direct, indirect, or both?) which are not registered in the Cap-and-Trade Program or in a GHG ETS to which California has linked pursuant to subarticle 12, and which are not involved in the line of direct or indirect corporate associations between two registered entities, the information must be updated within one year of the change at least annually, instead of within 30 calendar days of the change.

Subject: Forest Offset Protocol revisions

Comment:

The revisions to the site class system in Appendix F are quite confusing. In particular, the definition of the Forest Service's 7 site class system and the table just below this description on page 114. It is unclear how the standard method of site index by species should be converted into the 7 classes. Will a project proponent have to calculate cubic foot annual growth? If so, at what stage of stand development or over what portion of the baseline projection? Is there a crosswalk that is approved for use? Also, the column header is "Basal Area Cubic feet/acre/acre". These are 2 different measurement so what does it mean?

Please make an effort to clarify this language or else I fear there will be a great deal of mis-interpretation on the part of the verifiers and project developers.

thank you,
Paul Harper

Subject: Financial constraints in Forest Offset Protocol

Comment:

The current language in 6.2.1.3 does not result in a reasonable test of the financial viability of baseline modeling. It should allow comparison with harvest plans filed in the past on the same property that the carbon project is proposed. This is the best and most logical test of whether modeled timber harvesting is financially viable - that is it has happened before in that very same location.

In addition, when a comparison is made with a nearby THP, the language in 2.a. states that slopes cannot exceed slopes in the Project Area by MORE than 10%. However, it should say LESS because if a THP is viable on much steeper slopes, then it is certainly viable on gentler slopes, other things being equal.
